

Engaging Vitality

A palpation workshop for improving diagnostic techniques developed by Dan Bensky, Chip Chace, and Marguerite Dinkins

Module I: New York, NY

March 11-12, 2017

Pacific College of Oriental Medicine

Efficacy in acupuncture is grounded in the therapeutic engagement with qi. The Engaging Vitality training will expand the listening capacity of your hands and enhance your ability to directly perceive and work with qi in your practice.

How Will This Training Benefit Your Practice?

Using the palpatory sensibilities and vocabulary of osteopathy, participants will engage with practical manifestations of qi, including:

- How to feel the location of core restrictions
- How to use variations in temperature to gain general and specific information
- How to directly feel which points are most available for treatment and their precise locations
- How to directly assess the flow in each channel
- How to feel whether your treatments have produced a clinically meaningful change

Techniques such as these allow us to create a true dialogue with our patients' qi. They are primarily diagnostic in nature and are readily integrated with nearly any style of acupuncture.

How is the Program Organized?

This program is offered in a three-module format. This allows for depth of learning, ample time to enhance mastery of skill sets, and integration into clinical practice. Class size is limited to afford ample hands-on practice with direct supervision. In this Module I training, participants will learn the basics of this palpation approach. Participants who have completed Module I are then eligible to take subsequent modules taught by Dan Bensky, DO and Chip Chace, LAc.

This is a unique opportunity to be introduced to these valuable palpation techniques taught by Marguerite Dinkins, MAcOM, LAc.
